

With a domestic room loop, where the wire is around the edge of the room, the magnetic fields from each loop meet and cross over, causing confusion – a hearing aid user receives sound from both loops!

Using Two Loops Near Each Other

Using two personal amplifiers with neckloops (or domestic induction loops with seatpads) prevents this confusion, because the magnetic fields are smaller, and do not get mixed up.